Dr. John R. Grigsby, professor emeritus at the University of Florida, taught choral conducting and choral literature and, as UF's Director of Choral Activities, was responsible for the University Choir, Chamber Singers, Men's Glee Club and Women's Chorale. He also served as Acting Director of the School of Music and Assistant Director of the School of Music. Dr. Grigsby studied at Ohio State University, Union Theological Seminary School of Sacred Music and Columbia University. He has directed festivals and adjudicated choral clinics throughout the United States and Canada and, for nine years, was Director of Choral Music and Associate Coordinator of Worship and Sacred Music at New York's Chautauqua Institution. During retirement Dr. Grigsby and his wife, Gretchen, who taught elementary music at Stephen Foster and Norton, have been active in various volunteer pursuits including The Salvation Army, Interfaith Hospitality Network, Friends Across the Ages, and Holy Trinity Church.

Bess de Farber, clarinetist with the Gainesville Community Band, studied performance at the University of Southern California, where she was named the most outstanding clarinet graduate. She has performed extensively throughout Florida, both in person and on television. In 1996 she was commissioned to create Composing A Heart, a multimedia piece tracing her parents' emigration to the U.S. This work has been performed on NPR and at such South Florida venues as the Caldwell Theatre, and the Jewish Museum of Florida. Ms. de Farber has also served on grant review panels for the Florida Arts Council and National Endowment for the Arts and, for ten years, played bagpipe in the City of Dunedin Pipe Band.

Terry Moo, trumpet player par excellence, has called the Gainesville area "home" since 1970. He has long been a friend to music and music educators and frequently appears in concert with various area bands. After thirty years in retail music service he sold his company and began his other passion, multimedia production. He usually has either a horn or a camera in his hands, or most likely a set of headphones on his head. He has recorded every middle and high school band in the area and makes concert videos when called. Because he does audio recording and video production (with concert quality sound) he has appropriately named his new company Soundview Multimedia. He is also active as a private trumpet tutor and helps his wife Anna with her shows on the children's stage.

James B. King. . .

This concert is named in honor of Captain James B. King, late member of the Gainesville Community Band. Captain King served as principal clarinet and assistant conductor of the United States Marine Band, "The President's Own," under the administrations of Presidents Truman, Eisenhower, Kennedy and Johnson. After retiring in 1980, he and his wife, Joy, joined the Gainesville Community Band. Captain King died in October 2006, and each year the band presents this concert in memory of a great musician who served his country and was an inspiration to all. As a further remembrance of Captain King, a clarinet will be presented in his name to an outstanding Alachua County middle school band student. Great Southern Music in the Oaks Mall Plaza, 6787 West Newberry Road, has graciously donated the memorial clarinet.
